MOTION TO CONTINUE TRIAL DATE

Plaintiff respectfully requests that the trial scheduled for January 29, 2019 be reset to some date in March as Plaintiff desires to spend January skiing in Switzerland, Lichtenstein, and Austria while searching for real estate [a second home] and then intends to spend February in South America searching for agricultural property and a third home. Also the weather in NE Ohio isn't particularly great in January and February and Defendant would probably try to grant himself a default judgment and order the court to cease operations if he felt inconvenienced by having to travel through winter snow. Additionally, this case shouldn't actually go to trial since Plaintiff should be granted summary judgment in the next 4-8 weeks, and if summary judgment isn't granted the incoming judge will likely want a bit of time to familiarize himself with the 600+ pages of Defendant's incoherent rants, self-granted defaults, declarations of crusade, threats to the court, ramblings about Ohio attorneys, letters of marque and reprisal, etc., and thus it might be prudent to set things for trial in March of 2019. Plaintiff would like a bit of a vacation from the incessant drama of this four year saga. There is also only so much of Martin Lindstedt that one man can take and having to read his frankly pornographic and obscene pleadings is very taxing on one's spiritual well-being.

As an aside, the most reasonable and procedurally ideal course of action would be to grant summary judgment to Plaintiff, set a damages hearing, hold a damages hearing, and let Defendant blunder his way through an incoherent rant with the appellate court. Failing that, incoming Judge Pat Condon will need some time to read the case file which is approaching the length of Tolstoy's War and Peace and he probably wants to set his own schedule in any event. Plaintiff would like to remind the Court that it is never too late to default Defendant as a sanction for threatening to destroy the court, threatening to unleash violence in Lake County, using racial slurs and profanity in pleadings, soliciting Plaintiff's murder [Plaintiff has an active CPSO on Defendant], filing pleadings on behalf of others [i.e. Roxie and Church], or to simply grant summary judgment against Defendant Lindstedt.

Respectfully submitted

Bryan Anthony Reo
