

normally require psychiatric treatment, psychological treatment, or other mental health services....”

No pattern of conduct, or any other elements of R.C. 2903.211(A), need to be established when the petition is based upon an allegation of a sexually oriented offense. R.C. 2903.214(C)(1). In such cases, a petitioner must establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the respondent committed a “sexually oriented offense” as defined by R.C. 2950.01 against the person to be protected by the order. There is no evidence of a sexually oriented offense in this case. Consequently, the analysis shall proceed solely pursuant to R.C. 2903.211(A).

The parties are involved in a civil case in the Lake County Common Pleas Court, in which the matter seems to have escalated. The Petitioner submitted evidence that the Respondent is inciting others to cause bodily harm to the petitioner via social media. There was also evidence of threats on social media that the Petitioner needs to die. The Magistrate reviewed Respondent’s answer and affidavit and questioned the Petitioner regarding the document. Based on everything submitted to the court, by both parties, it is the Magistrate’s opinion that there is a legitimate threat by the Respondent to the Petitioner.

Therefore, it is the recommendation of the magistrate that a civil order of protection ought to be granted for the protection of the Petitioner Bryan Reo, against the Respondent Martin Lindstedt through January 19, 2019.

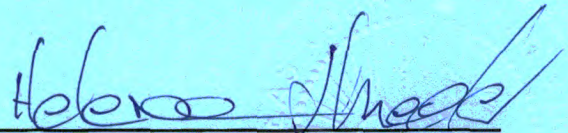

The clerk shall serve a copy of the within magistrate’s findings of fact and conclusions of law upon the interested parties identified below by regular U.S. Mail.
